DESIGNS, THREADS & FABRICS, and SPECIAL THINGS FOR TEA LOVERS

3 August 2025

Dear Needlework Friend,

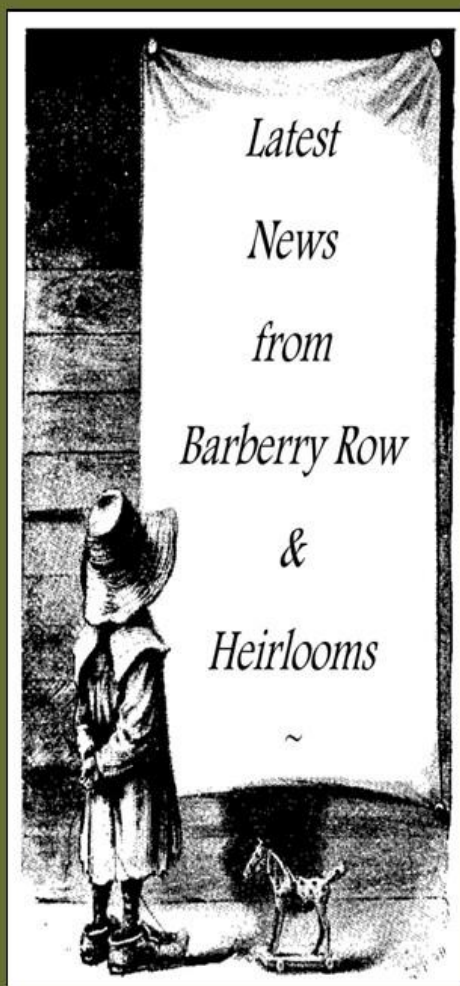

During the months of June and July the road to Robyn's awesome shop - Tis the Season - at Matangi in the Waikato was travelled many times.

The first trip was to set up a two-day POP-UP shop in Robyn's classroom area. Thank you to everyone who visited from near (Cambridge & Hamilton) and far (Auckland, Tauranga, Matamata, Tamaranui to name a few). Sincerely appreciated. Loved seeing you all and receiving your hugs. And a special thank you to Robyn for the opportunity. A wonderful friend.

The next couple of trips - two weeks apart - were for Melissa and myself to attend two one-day classes for making a special object. Once upon a time I used to sew every day but I haven't sewn for over 30 years and so a challenge. Watch this space for something different from my hands!

Now it is time for me to settle down and let you know what is new tot the Needlework Gallery over the past few months. Lots of lovely things but will only touch on a few of them in this note

- ♦ Two new Quaker inspired designs
- ♦ Colour co-ordinated linen and finishing fabrics with a silk over-dyed thread & a DMC stranded cotton thread with a FREE pincushion design
- ♦ Four new finishing fabrics to add to your stash for backdrops, pincushions, scissor fobs, ornamentals, etc.
- ♦ Special items for lovers of a cup of tea

The two new Quaker designs from Barberry Row in the 'A Little Quaker Gem' series

100% natural ingredients

Uniquely packaged in a beautifully decorated metal tin which can be reused

A luxurious gift for a loved one

For centuries Ceylon tea has been known as the finest tea in the world.
Tea was first introduced to Sri Lanka (formerly known as Ceylon) by James Taylor in 1867.

There are three main types of Ceylon tea:

- The first, and most popular is the black Ceylon tea, and also the most complicated. The complication arises from the fact that the stem and leaves of the tea plant are used when making black tea. Authentic black Ceylon tea is made using aged stems and fermented leaves.

- The second type, Ceylon green tea avoids the fermentation process. This ensures the tea leaf remains green and gives the brewed cup of tea a yellowish-green colour. The tea leaves are either pan-fried or steamed right after the rolling process to stop further fermentation.
- Thirdly, Ceylon white tea, also known as 'Silver Tops'. Only the 'bud' is handpicked and sun-dried. A special clone of the Camelia Sinensis is used to pluck these silver tips which are longer and bolder than usual buds. Silver tips are known to carry the most amount of health benefits as it is the least processed tea.

These have proven to be extremely popular.
