

Blog #30 - Sampler Frisien 1750

Saturday, 24 January 2015 -

If you have been following my blog, in Blog #21, I showed a reproduction sampler I had previously put aside but picked up again and was determined to finish.

This is how it looked on the 8th of November 2014 - and this is how it looks today and when I finished it just before Christmas last year -

I am SO thrilled with it.

I especially love the colours in it as they are MY colours - burgundy's and greens.

*And to make this sampler a little unique,
I have added my name and the year date
in which I stitched it below the year of 1750
in which it was originally stitched.*

This particular design is a reproduction of an original from the extensive private collection of my Belgium friend, Gigi.

If you would like to stitch this piece for yourself, please request a copy to be sent to you.
